

From the Desk Guest Editorial

Recent years have witnessed phenomenal change in field of education.

The educationist has modified the curriculum keeping in mind the need of the day.

Dentistry has change its design and momentum as per requirement of today need for modern education and training facilities to budding dentist.

In line with vision of regulatory body of Dental education in India, the Publication of Research work, Review article & Case Reports is mandatory in reputed journals.

The majority of article which are there in the journal present new data or ideas.

The Author with standard research articles, will present their own work, including methods and results. However, given the nature of this journal, authors may provide more context and discussion than is typical of a standard research article, resulting in a paper with more review-like features.

Research articles Published in the journal are in the context of the wider issue and be accessible and of interest to a broad audience. The editors should examine while reviewing paper that an element of looking forward towards the future of the field, as well as content to excite the reader about the possibilities of research in this area is a key motto of the paper. The format of research articles is flexible, and could also include hypothesis papers, synthesis articles, meta-analyses, methods papers, replications, policy papers etc., as long as they provide a useful and interesting contribution to the issue as a whole. It is also important to include some review articles in the issue, which explain the implications of the topic to other areas of science. This helps to ensure that the publication appeals to a wide audience, and to explain the value of the field to other specific areas. Reviews must offer a novel, interesting insight into the subject area. They will tend to generate innovative and testable ideas, and include constructive discussions and/or critiques of the field. Authors are welcome to include new data within review articles if appropriate.

The Dental College of Aligarh Muslim University is publishing its own journal for providing the platform to Dental persons for publishing their research work and clinical Reports. The publications done in this Journal stand parallel to the standard of international Journal. The editorial team including Prof. N. D. Gupta Chief Editor of this journal is very dedicated and Very professional towards the Scrutiny of articles and its acceptance before Publication. In coming Days I hope that this journal will be most accepted journal for many of the researchers for Publication of their articles.
